Information about JOSH Committees

What is a JOSH Committee? A Joint Occupational Safety and Health (JOSH) Committee is a group of worker and employer representatives who work together to address health and safety issues in their workplace.

Do you need a JOSH Committee? If your workplace employs twenty or more workers, the law on Prince Edward Island says that a Joint Occupational Health and Safety Committee (committee) must be established.

Who is on the JOSH Committee? The committee is composed of an equal number of worker and employer representatives who provide a link between management and staff, so that health and safety solutions can be developed, together under the internal responsibility system. See more OHS info on the UPSE website: <https://www.peiupse.ca/safety/faq/>

Members: Please Update Personal Contact Information

The union encourages all members to take an active role in the union by keeping up-to-date on union news and issues. To ensure you receive the most recent UPSE communication materials, please update your contact information with the union.
